A New Battleship
Ready for Trial Trip

San Francisco, Aug. 27.—The battleship Wisconsin will go out on her trial trip on September 15th. Preparations for the event have already begun, the men necessary for the trip having been engaged including even those in the steward's department. All hands have been ordered to report on board the battleship tomorrow afternoon, and have been engaged for six weeks.

The Wisconsin has been under construction for more than three years and would have been completed long since but for the shortage in material. When the war with Spain was declared the Navy Department first considered the practicability of finishing the war ships then in process of construction. The Wisconsin at that time, early in 1898, was reported as being half completed. To finish the other half of the vessel has taken a long time, but the Government could not finish the armor plate, which delayed the building of the battleship. It is the largest vessel ever turned out on the Pacific Coast and no larger craft has yet been completed in the United States. The armor plate came in sections and the big guns came one by one. But now everything is here and in place, and the preliminaries for the trial trip are being arranged.

Before the trial trip can take place there are many details to be gone over, many rivets to be secured, and the machinery all to be tested. The engines will be turned over and over again at the dock before the ship will go for a run. Then will come the spurs on the bay, the warming up of the vessel and, lastly, the trial spin out on the ocean. Before this last test is made the Wisconsin will probably run up to Puget sound and be put on the dry dock at Port Orchard, there being no dry dock here large enough to hold her. On the dock she will be overhauled and cleaned and put in the best possible condition.

The Wisconsin is larger than the Oregon by 2,000 tons displacement and has a displacement of 1,600 tons more than the Iowa now in port.

Fastest Battleship

Is the Alabama

Boston, Aug. 28.—With a new boom at the fore, signifying another speed victory for Cramps, the new United States battleship Alabama steamed into the harbor at 5:30 this afternoon after an official trial trip over the deep water course from Thatcher's Island to Boone Island. The vessel had steamed at an average speed of seventeen knots per hour for consecutive hours, without taking into account the strong flood tide, which, when the allowances are figured out properly, will probably contribute a substantial addition to her speed. The Alabama also reached a maximum speed of 18 knots for a distance of 6.6 knots space. When tidal allowances are prepared they will doubtless show that the latest addition to Uncle Sam's navy is the fastest battleship of her tonnage afloat.

The general opinion expressed by the naval men on the craft during her trial trip was that her average will be about 17.1 knots an hour for the four hours. The contract requirement for the ship was that she should steam sixteen knots an hour for four consecutive hours.

REGISTRATION ROLLS FOR THE NOVEMBER ELECTIONS ARE OPEN. REGISTER TODAY.
